THIS WEEK ON LOCAL-GOVERNMENT FEEDS

Shelter and animal posts on social media.

Three posts from the past two weeks that do the job: get a dog seen, tell a rescue story, and close the loop.

GIVE ADOPTERS THE FACTS

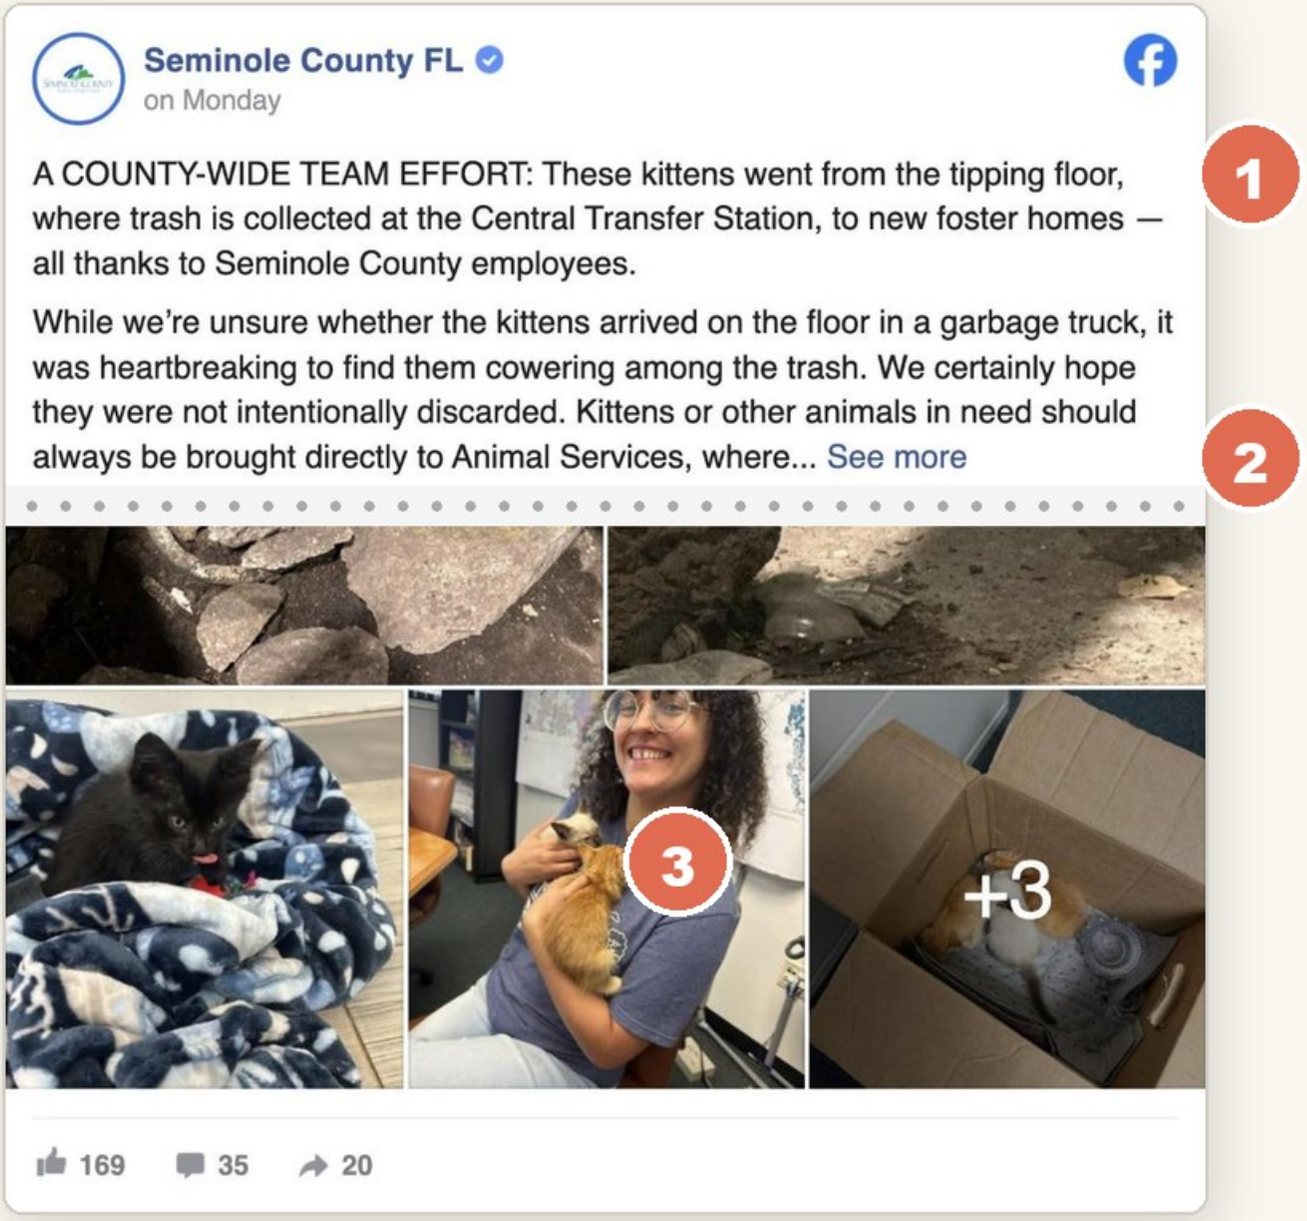

Gwinnett County, Georgia

1. A name and an ID number, right on the photo.
2. Age, weight, and where he was found, in the first two lines.
3. Honest about temperament: timid, and treats help.

TELL THE RESCUE STORY

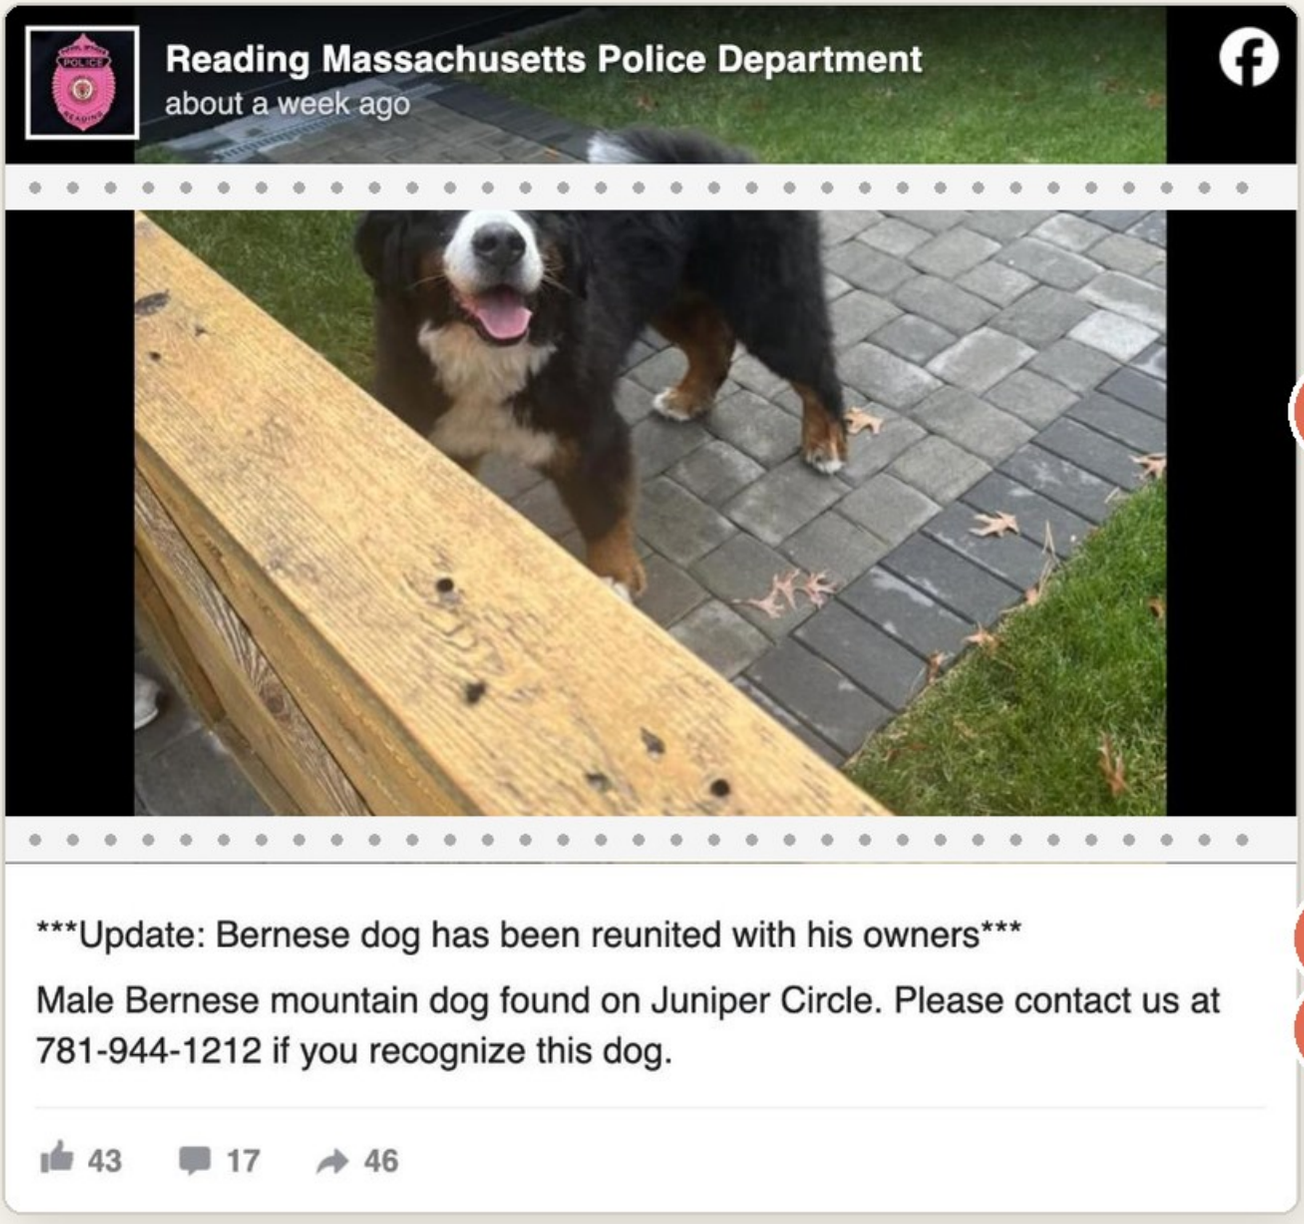

Seminole County, Florida

1. Credits the team: kittens found at the trash transfer station, fostered by county employees.
2. Tells residents what to do next time: bring animals straight to Animal Services.
3. Shows the people behind it, kittens in hand.

CLOSE THE LOOP

Reading Police, Massachusetts

1. Updates the post when the story ends: reunited with his owners.
2. Keeps the original ask: where he was found and a number to call.
3. One clear photo, so neighbors can recognize him.

BORROW THESE

Five habits of animal posts that work

1. Lead with a name.
   And an ID number adopters can ask for.

2. Give the facts up front.
   Age, size, and where the animal came from.

3. Be honest about personality.
   Shy, energetic, good with cats. It saves a return trip.

4. Credit the people.
   Staff, volunteers, and fosters make the story.

5. Update when it ends.
   Reunited or adopted: say so on the same post.
