

HOW GOVERNMENTS TALK ABOUT

Housing and growth.

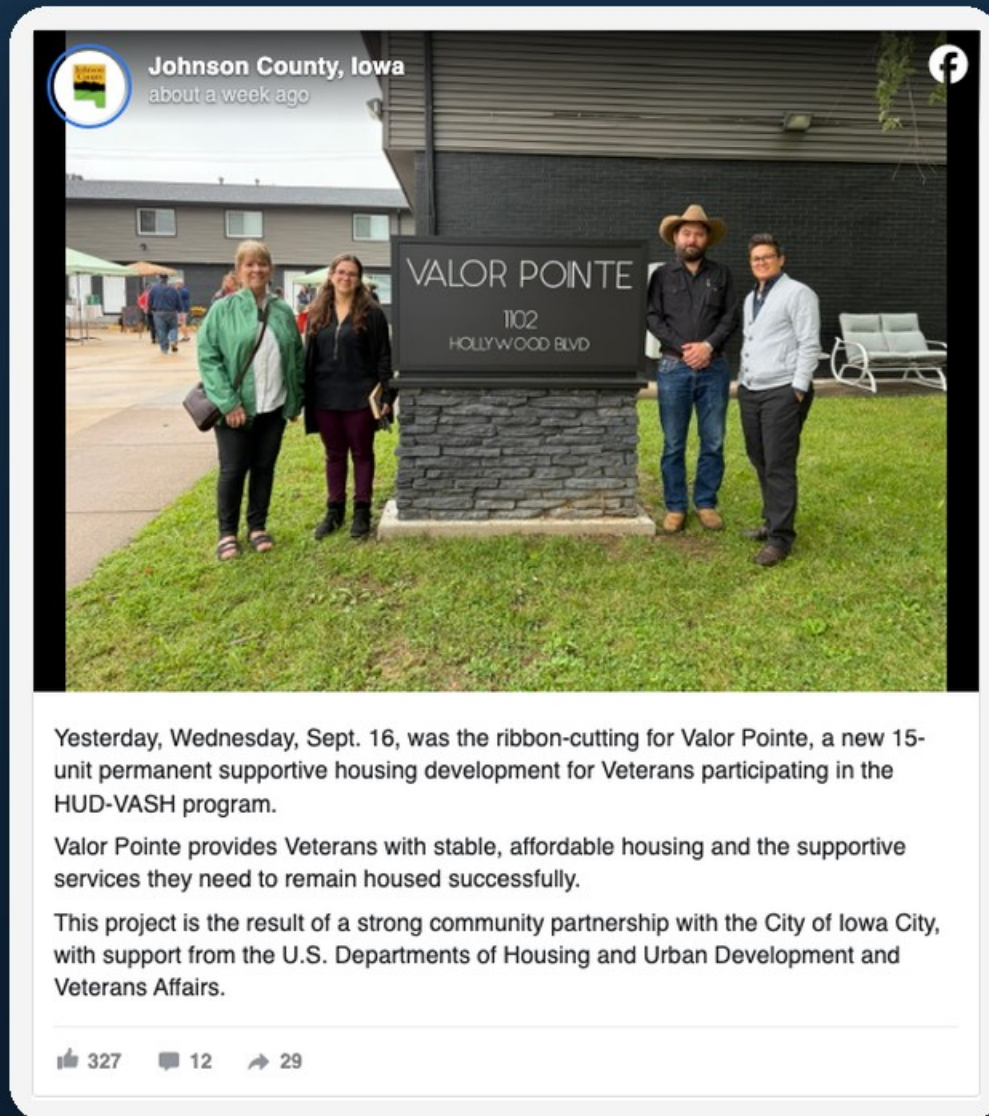

New homes, long-stalled sites, programs for builders. Three ways local governments are making growth news concrete for residents.

Show who it's for.

WHY IT WORKS

A ribbon-cutting for Valor Pointe, 15 homes with supportive services for veterans. The post centers the people who will live there and the partners who built it.

DOVER · NEW JERSEY

Own the delay, then show what's next.

PUBLIC HEARING & FINAL ADOPTION | SEPTEMBER 22

📌 AFTER YEARS OF DELAYS, A NEW FUTURE IS TAKING SHAPE FOR THE HARRY LOORY SITE

Mayor James P. Dodd is proud to announce that a completely redesigned redevelopment project for the long-stalled Harry Loory properties is officially moving forward.

For nearly a decade, this important downtown site remained stalled as the previously approved project became increasingly difficult to finance and ultimately failed to advance.... See more

WHY IT WORKS

“After years of delays” is in the first line. Then a rendering and the numbers residents care about: homes, parking, and retail space.

LEON COUNTY · FLORIDA

Invite the builders in.

WHY IT WORKS

Not just a program announcement: a workshop for developers and realtors on building affordable homes, with a date, a room, and a sign-up link.

THE THROUGH-LINE

Make growth concrete.

People connect with who a project serves, what it will look like, and how they can be part of it. A face, a rendering, a date on the calendar.
