NEW GUIDE

Handing off your social media to someone new.

In most towns, social media isn't a job. It's a duty that lands on a clerk, a deputy or a new hire. This guide is the roadmap, from the manager's side.

How to set it up →

GovFeeds

swipe →

FIRST, THE ACCOUNT

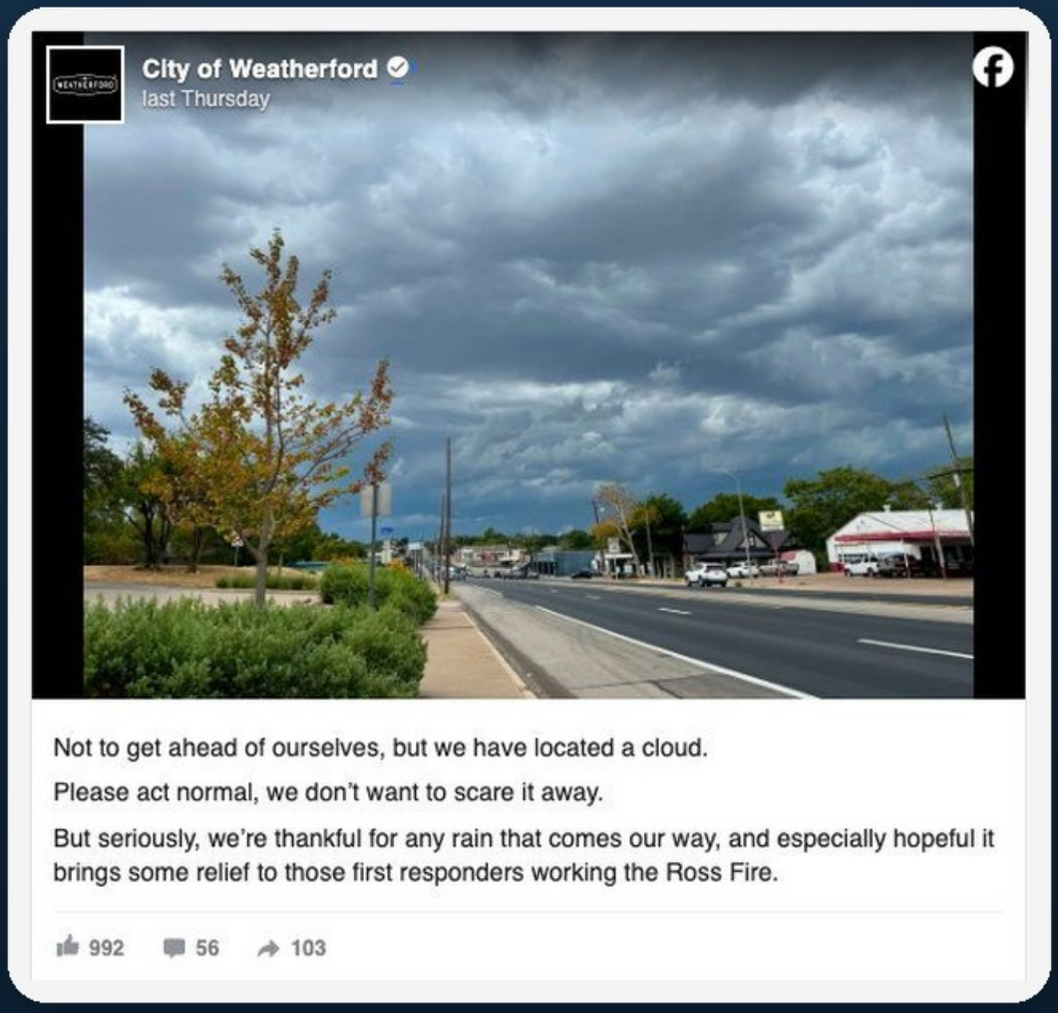

Fix the account before the content.

The page should belong to the government, with two named admins. Not a personal profile, not a private group.

Then write down five decisions on one page: who posts, how often, the categories, what comes to the manager first, and what never goes up.

CITY OF WEATHERFORD · TEXAS

Pre-approve categories, not posts.

WHY IT WORKS

Mid-drought, the city posted one cloud and a promise not to get ahead of themselves. Nobody approves that on a Friday afternoon unless the answer is already yes.

GovFeeds

swipe →

RICHLAND COUNTY · SOUTH CAROLINA

Let the moment through.

WHY IT WORKS

A passerby caught two deputies changing a stranded driver's tire, and the department posted the candid photos. The person holding the phone knew the answer was yes.

GovFeeds

swipe →

GIVE THEM A HEAD START

Month one, on rails.

GovFeeds shows a new person what governments like theirs post, and drafts posts in a voice that fits.

Try GovFeeds free for 14 days:

app.govfeeds.com

GovFeeds