

NEW GUIDE · 1.3 MILLION POSTS

Your first 90 days on government social media.

There's no published benchmark for what a town's post should earn, so the number in most heads comes from a neighbor's best week. This guide replaces it with measurement.

Three findings to start with →

THE NUMBER NOBODY TELLS YOU

33–45%

of local-government Facebook posts earn zero likes, comments or shares. A typical post in a town under 10,000 earns 1 to 2 reactions. That is normal.

44.7% of posts from communities under 2,500 get zero engagement; so do 32.6% from cities over 100,000.

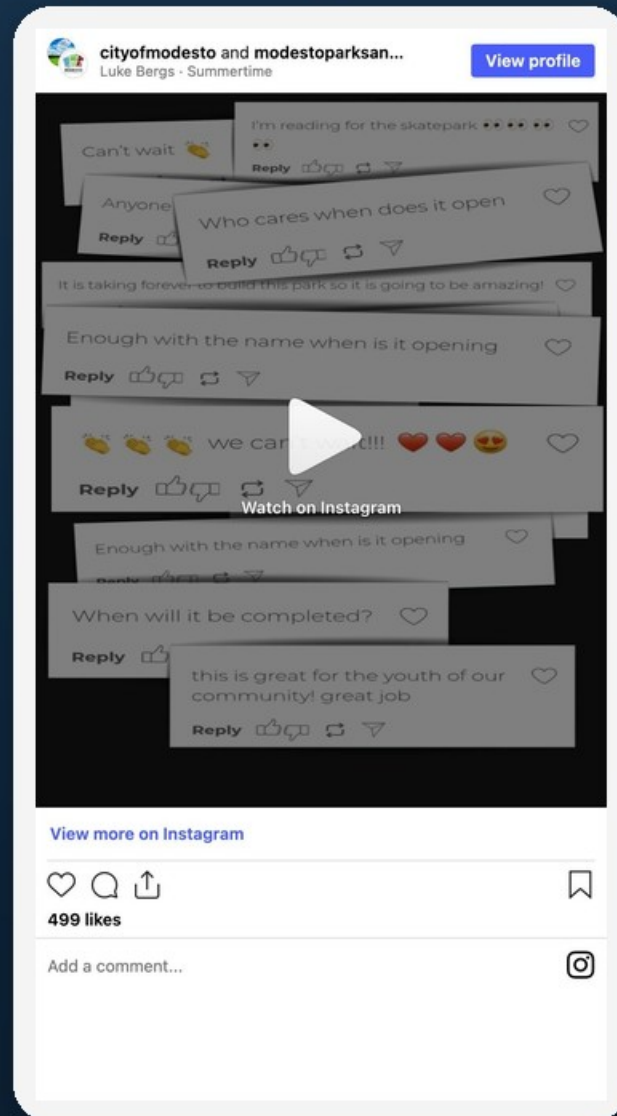

FACEBOOK IS STILL WHERE IT HAPPENS

8 vs. 1

Among governments running both, the same city's typical Facebook post earns 8 interactions and its typical X post earns 1. X loses to the same government's Facebook in 93% of cases.

CITY OF MODESTO · CALIFORNIA

On Instagram, use video.

WHAT THE DATA SAYS

Video beats images on Instagram in 76% of governments, yet governments give Instagram 82% images. Modesto made a video out of residents' impatient comments about a delayed park.

READ THE GUIDE

Move the median, not the outlier.

Write down your size band's typical post.
Ninety days from now, the goal is to have moved that middle number.

The full guide, with a checklist you can paste into a draft:

govfeeds.com/guides/first-90-days