

HOW GOVERNMENTS TALK ABOUT

Budgets and property taxes on social media.

It's tax-bill and budget-hearing season.
Three ways governments are making the numbers make sense to the households reading them.

- Bloomfield Township, New Jersey
- La Crosse County, Wisconsin
- Commerce Township, Michigan

Explain the bill before the calls start.

WHY IT WORKS

As bills arrived, the mayor explained the increase, why the fourth-quarter bill may run higher than the third, where the dollars go, and what help exists.

Protect residents from the scam.

WHY IT WORKS

An AI-generated video told seniors to call their assessor about a tax program that doesn't exist. The county said it plainly: not real, and not us.

COMMERCE TOWNSHIP · MICHIGAN

Lay out what's on the ballot.

WHY IT WORKS

A pathway bond and millage proposal heads to the November ballot. The township published the ballot language and what it would fund, and left the vote to voters.

THE THROUGH-LINE

Make the numbers make sense.

Residents don't need the budget document. They need to know what changed, why, and what it means for their household, from the people who can answer.
